Weekend shootings leave 4 dead

At least 35 people shot across the city during a 36-hour window

Chicago Tribune

At least 35 people were shot in Chicago, four of them fatally, in 36 hours over the weekend.

Officers responded to at least 26 incidents, starting at 3:30 p.m. Friday in the West Woodlawn neighborhood on the South Side involving an attack that left a 17-year-old girl dead. There were also fatal shootings in the South Shore neighborhood Friday night and the Washington Park neighborhood early Sunday.

Chicago Police Department spokesman Adam Collins declined to comment on whether the weekend's temperatures—Saturday reached 80, the city's warmest day so far this year—contributed to the number of shootings, though criminologists have said that weather does play a role in violent crime.

Shontell Brown, mother of 17-year-old Gakirah Barnes killed Friday, called the situation on the city's streets "an ongoing war."

Barnes, of the 8000 block of South South Shore Drive, was pronounced dead at 5:43 p.m. at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, the Cook County medical examiner's office said. An autopsy done Saturday determined that she died of multiple gunshot wounds and her death was ruled a homicide, the office said.

Nearly 34 hours later, a 20-year-old man was fatally shot outside a home in the 3000 block of West 53rd Place in the Gage Park neighborhood on the Southwest Side. He was identified by the Cook County medical examiner's office as Joshua Martinez, of the 4900 block of South Karlov Avenue.

Police said a "known offender" shot him about 1:10 a.m. Sunday and the shooting may be gang-related.

Later, two people were shot in the 6000 block of South Indiana Avenue in Washington Park, police said. A 32-year-old man was hit in the upper chest and died at Stroger Hospital. A 27-year-old woman was shot in the leg and also was taken to Stroger.

The medical examiner's office identified the man as Corey Brownlee, of the same block where he was shot. He was pronounced dead at 3:26 a.m.

Friday's second fatal shooting occurred on the porch of a home in the 6800 block of South Crandon Avenue. Shannon Mack, 34, of the same block, was pronounced dead at 10:45 p.m. An autopsy determined that he died of multiple gunshot wounds, and his death was ruled a homicide.

Lourdes Arias, one of the quilt's creators, visits it on Saturday, Nuccioninuzzo/TRIBUNE

Quilt displays victims' names

Chicago Tribune

Lindsay Evans' eyes gravitated to the lower end of the 4-foot-by-6-foot piece of fabric, where the names were so abundant in some neighborhoods that they were stitched on top of each other in a barely legible confluence of Chicago's violence.

"You can see the hurt and confusion in it," said Evans, 26, from Philadelphia.

Hers is the desired reaction for the group of artists who created "Untitled (Homicide Quilt)," a quilted map of Chicago with the names of each of the city's 2013 homicide victims stitched into the neighborhood where a life ended.

"I really hope it sparks conversation and awareness," said Monica Fuentes, 32, a Pilsen resident and one of 15 artists who worked on the quilt.

The public got its first look at the project Saturday night at a Craft/Work exhibit at Beauty & Brawn gallery, 3501 W. Fullerton Ave., in the city's Logan Square neighborhood.

The quilt is the brainchild of Craft/Work co-founders and artists Nora Renick-Rinehart and Rachel Wallis, who worked for about three months on the quilt.

Using RedEye Chicago's online homicide tracker, Wallis compiled a list of 415 homicide victims, their ages, neighborhoods and how they were slain.

Some neighborhoods, such as Lincoln Square, bear few to no names. But others, such as South Shore, have 20 to 50.

Lourdes Arias, 46, stitched 21 names into the West Englewood patch, among other neighborhoods.

"It's so amazing, the concentrated areas and then some with no names," she said. "And why is that? There's an imbalance here."

Many in the crowd Saturday lingered for several minutes in front of the quilt; some ran their fingers over the names.

The quilt will be on display at Beauty & Brawn through May.

Tax nightmare

GETTY IMAGES

Reuters

There are many tax-time nightmares, but here's one of the most common: You don't have the cash to pay what you owe on April 15.

"A couple of weeks ago, I ended up talking a young woman off a ledge, as it were, because she discovered she had screwed up on her withholding and owed a bunch of tax," said Melody Thornton, a certified public accountant in Cardiff, Calif.

If you find yourself in that situation, don't ignore the problem. The worst thing you can do is put off filing your return, without at least requesting an extension, because you're afraid of the bill. The penalties for not filing a tax return are far harsher than those for not paying what you owe.

The penalty for not filing a tax return normally runs 5 percent per month that your return is late, up to a maximum of 25 percent. That means if you owe $2,000, and don't pay it until the fall, you could owe a $500 penalty. The penalty for not paying is just a fraction of that, at 0.5 percent a month of the unpaid tax at April 15. Either way, you'll also owe interest, though the current rate is a modest 3 percent a year.

File an extension

The simplest thing to do is to file for a sixmonth extension, using Form 4868, to get some breathing room. If you can, send in a partial payment to reduce the penalties and interest due.

"The most important thing is making sure that you have a valid extension," Thornton said. "If you file an extension and say, 'I owe nothing,' and then you do owe, that extension is not a valid extension."

How to pay

You'll need to decide whether to pay the Internal Revenue Service first—the standard advice—or to swallow the penalties and interest.

offered up to $5,000 to leave their jobs under a "Pay to Quit" program, according to a letter to shareholders.

What's ideal for you depends on what your options are for coming up with the funds. If you can scrimp a little to find the cash, borrow from friends or family, or have access to cheap credit (through a home-equity loan, for example), your best option is to pay the tax bill first.

But if you'd have to pay your taxes with a high-interest-rate credit card-today's national average interest rate on credit cards is 15 percent, according to creditcards.com—it may be better to borrow briefly from the government (see below), especially if you'll have additional income coming in soon.

When you pay your taxes on a credit card, you also have to pay an added "convenience fee" that could add up to 2.35 percent to your transaction.

If you're in deep financial distress

While it may sound counterintuitive, let the IRS know vou've got financial problems. You can request an installment plan to pay those taxes, and it's pretty much automatic that you'll be approved if you owe less than $50,000. While there's no hard-and-fast rule on when to do this, generally the more you owe and the longer it will take to pay off, the better off you'll be to request a formal payment plan rather than simply paying late.

"If you are not paying, the IRS can come after your property or garnish your wages, so you definitely want to contact them and work with them," said Lindsey Buchholz, principal analyst at the Tax Institute at H&R Block. "The IRS is usually willing to work with people because they would rather you pay voluntarily than have to come after you."

To set up an installment plan, you'll file Form 9465, and pay an application fee of between $43 and $120, depending on your income level and whether you're setting up a direct debit agreement. You'll then have a monthly payment schedule, that you better stick with, and a much-smaller, 0.25 percent, monthly penalty on those unpaid taxes.

By Rachel Cromidas | REDEYE

In 2012, Grace Sweeney did the impossible. She found a studio in Lincoln Park for $745 a month—just within the budget she kept as an unpaid intern out of college.

It was steps from Fullerton Avenue and Clark Street, had a walk-in closet and utilities included ... but no kitchen.

"It had a full-sized fridge, which was nice, and a microwave, and I bought myself a toaster oven. I did my dishes in the [bathroom] sink," Sweeney said. "It was definitely a crazy trade-off, but the price was great."

For longtime Chicagoans, spacious, affordable studios for less than $700 in such trendy neighborhoods as Lakeview and Wicker Park are a recent memory. But for many people new to the city, they are the stuff of myth. The average rent for a studio in Chicago is more than $1,200 a month, according to data from listings website apartments.com, but some people are still finding deals—but with less square footage and fewer amenities. Others are heading south of Roosevelt Road, west of Western Avenue and north to Uptown and Rogers Park in search of more reasonable rents.

Amber Payden, 30, of Bronzeville, said she is dismayed that many Chicagoans believe they have to live in one of a few North Side neighborhoods to feel safe from crime. She just moved from the West Loop to a luxury high-rise near 31st Street and Michigan Avenue, but her roommate backed out of the deal at the last minute over concerns about South Side crime reports.

"She was like, you know, I'm not moving here, it's the South Side," Payden said.

Payden said she has more amenities than she can count in her two-bedroom, two-bathroom apartment, including in-unit laundry and a deck, along with proximity to several bus routes and Dunbar Park. The rent is $1,375 a month.

"When I looked at the place, it was originally $1,550, and they had gone down in price because the owner was saying there were a lot of people who didn't know the area and were afraid to move there," she said. "Ironically, some of those neighborhoods up north are not even as nice as this."

Real estate experts pin several factors on the $700-a-month studio's near-extinction, including the recession, which has made buying less attractive than renting for many, and the gentrification of neighborhoods that were once considered scrappier, like Bucktown, the Near West Side and Lincoln Square.

"The reality is, typically when a deal is too good to be true, it usually is," said Robert Richmond, a director of sales for Apartment Finders. "And that's more true in the Chicago rental market than ever."

Richmond said it was easy to find a cheap studio when he started working at the real estate company six years ago, but those places

Michelle and Joe Higgins at their apartment in Chicago

For that price in different areas, it can be so much smaller or so much older."

-Michelle Higgins, on apartment sizes in different areas of the city have started to disappear as neighborhoods grow in popularity and landlords spring for upgrades.

"Now, there might be a building or two that still offer old-school rents, where owners know what they need to make, but don't care about making more," he said, "but owners are a lot more savvy than they used to be."

And if those owners can afford to renovate their units, he added, it's becoming a better and better business decision.

"Owners are finding they're getting more value out of renovations now than they ever have in Chicago," he said, including relatively inexpensive changes like putting in granite countertops or stainless steel appliances. "If you make even a small change to a studio that's $450 square feet, like taking out the carpet and putting in hardwood floors, they're seeing increased rents by 10 to 35 percent."

That means, if you're among the young professionals and students attracted to communities like Lakeview and Lincoln Park for their nightlife and proximity to trains and the lakefront, it's harder than ever to find that deal, especially without wading through a handful of bad options first.

Chastidy Burns, 27, wanted to live in Lakeview, but was daunted by how little her budget—less than $1,000 a month—would get her. When she finally found her studio, near Grace Street and Pine Grove Avenue, on Craigslist for $800 (it's gone up to $840 now), she decided its small size was worth the tradeoff of being close to her friends and living in a neighborhood she considered safe.

Patrick Welby faced a similar predicament when he apartment-hunted in Lakeview a year ago on a budget of $1,000, and settled on a studio near Broadway and Surf Street that now rents for $900 a month. He said taking a place on the higher end of his budget paid off in space: It has a walk-in closet, a kitchen area separate from where he sleeps and room for his bicycle.

"My friends are generally in awe of how big my space is compared to their [studios]," Welby, 24, said. "It's nice to go back to something that's not just one room, and having the cooking separate from where I sleep is a nice break in the action."

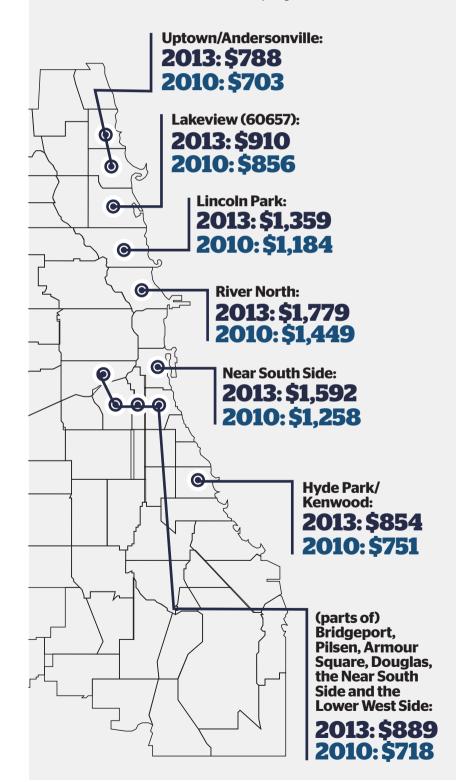

Michelle Higgins, 26, and her husband Joe, 28, were lucky enough to find a bigger place. When they moved to Chicago from Atlanta in July 2011 they were hoping a less-than-$900 budget would find them a place large enough for two people. They settled into their one-bedroom apartment near Lawrence and Hermitage avenues that rents for $895 a month, after deciding they could live with less closet space.

"For that price in different areas," Michelle Higgins said, "it can be so much smaller or so much older."

Chicago area residents plan to run in Boston after last year's tragedy

Chicago Tribune

Volker Fischer, of Highland Park, had just crossed the finish line when the first bomb exploded behind him, sending dark smoke into the air on that fateful day in downtown

Skokie resident Luni Tiongson was about two blocks beyond the finish line, retrieving her gear and preparing to meet her husband, Ron, who had finished the race about a halfhour before her.

Cynthia Garcia had just passed the 26-mile marker.

"I could see the finish line. Then all of a sudden I heard a big boom,* the Rogers Park resi-

Despite the horrific events that ruined what was supposed to be a triumphant day filled with celebration a year ago Tuesday, these runners and scores of others from the Chicago area are returning to Boston next week for the city's annual marathon. They are going honor the victims and first responders from the tragedy last year.

About four hours into the 2013 Boston Marathon, two pressure-cooker bombs exploded near the finish line on Boylston Street, killing three people and injuring 26.4 others. Two men who turned out to be brothers were suspected of the attacks. One was killed in a shootout with police. The other was arrested and is awaiting trial.

Volker Fischer (left), who participated in last year's Boston Marathon, runs with Cory Kalvass in Lake Forest, on April 7. Nuccio DINUZZO TRIBUNE.

The 2014 marathon has drawn about 36,000 registered runners, the maximum that organizers allow for the race and 9,000 more than last year's total. The entrants include more than 1,000 runners from Illinois and hundreds from the Chicago area.

Among the local runners will be those who a year ago were forced to stop before the finish line as well as those who completed the 26.2-mile course but want to race again to show their solidarity with Boston. Many runners who were stopped didn't have their cellphones, making it difficult to reconnect with family.

After the first bomb exploded, Fischer said he saw people running toward the smoke to help. He thought of his friend who also ran the race but a bit faster.

"I remember thinking, 'It's a great idea to keep moving, but which direction should I go?' said Fischer, who eventually connected with his friends.

This year's Boston Marathon will be Fischer's seventh, and he's not scared to return. "We can't let those guys dictate our actions," he said.

Heal Disc And Sciatica Pain?

If you suffer from the following conditions...

- Sciatica
- Disc herniations
- Lower back pain
- Numbness in the legs
- Radiating hip pain

...there may be hope. Now, a local doctor has what may be the most important treatment in helping these conditions. No matter where you are with back pain, whether you're having unrelenting sciatic pain and facing surgery or you just injured it yesterday, a treatment called low level laser therapy may be the answer for you.

Are These Healing Lasers Safe?

Laser therapy has been tested for 40 years, had over 2000 papers published on it and been shown to aid in damaged tissue regeneration, decrease inflammation, relieve pain and boost the immune system. Before the FDA would clear Laser Therapy for human use, they wanted to see proof that it worked. This led to two landmark studies. The first study showed that patients who had Laser Therapy had 53% better improvement than those who had a placebo. The second study showed patients who used the Laser Therapy had less pain and more range of motion days after treatment. If Laser Therapy help these patients, it can help you too.

Could This Non-Invasive Treatment Eliminate Your Back and Sciatic Pain?

My name is Dr. Paul Ruzila, owner of Chicago Chiropractic and Wellness. I understand what it feels like to live in pain, because I see it every day. We've seen hundreds of people with back pain, numbness, and sciatica leave the office pain free. This is why for the First 25 Callers Only, we're running a very special offer where you can find out if you are a candidate for Laser Therapy.

How Much Does It Cost?

For the First 25 Callers Only, $35 will get you all the services I normally change new patients $250 for! What does this offer include? Everything. Take a look at what you will receive:

- An in-depth consultation about your health and well-being where I will listen...really listen...to the details of your case.
- A complete neuromuscular examination, as well as a neurological exam.
- A full set of specialized x-rays to determine if a spinal problem is contributing to your pain or symptoms.
- A thorough analysis of your exam and x-ray findings so we can start mapping out your plan to being pain free.

Be one of the first 25 Callers and you can get everything we've listed here for only $35.

Have you tried just about everything for your sciatic pain?

Have you been on pain pills or even 'advanced' to the prescription Vicodin, Soma or some other muscle relaxer? But the real problem is while you make it through the day all "numbed up", you are likely making your problem even worse...without knowing it.

The normal price for this type of evaluation including x-rays is $250, so you're saving a considerable amount by taking me up on this offer. Treatments are not expensive, especially when compared to back surgery or physical therapy. Call 312-212-1150 now and we can get you scheduled for your consultation, exam and x-rays as soon as there's an opening. Come see us and you'll get to see how gentle this treatment will be on your back and leg. You may be back to having fun in just a matter of days. When you call, tell the receptionist you'd like to come in for the Laser Evaluation so we can make sure you receive proper credit for this special offer.

Sincerely,

Paul Ruzila, D.C.

P.S. Why suffer for years in misery? That's no way to live, not when there could be an easy solution to your problem.

"Before treatment...I could not put very much weight on my left leg. I could not walk or stand for long periods of time and had tremendous pain in my lower back and down left leg. Since having treatments the pain in gone! I can walk and put weight on my left leg. Would highly recommend and have told friends about my results."

"I have had severe back pain and sciatica for the past 10 to 15 years. Sleeping through the night was impossible. Receiving this treatment is the best decision I have made and I still can't believe how well it worked. I'm back to normal."

Police officers gather at the scene of a shooting at a Jewish community center in Overland Park, Kan., on Sunday. REUTERS

3 dead after shootings at Kan. Jewish centers

Three people were killed Sunday afternoon at two different Jewish community facilities in Overland Park, Kan., and a man was in custody as authorities investigated whether or not the shootings were anti-Semitic, authorities said.

Police said it was too early to determine a motive for the shootings, but they were not ruling out the possibility that the shootings were a hate crime. They have called in the Federal Bureau of Investigation to assist with the investigation, Overland Park Police Chief John Douglass said in a news conference.

"We know it's a vicious act of violence. Obviously two Jewish facilities, one might make that assumption," Douglass said.

The shootings started around 1 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center of Greater Kansas City in Overland Park. Two male victims in a parking lot outside the center were shot, with one dying at the scene and another later at a hospital. The shooter then drove just a mile away to the Village Shalom retirement community that provides skilled nursing services for residents. A woman was shot and killed there, Douglass said.

Two other people were shot at, but not hit, the police chief said, and a shotgun was involved and possibly other types of guns.

The suspect, a bearded white male in his 70s, was taken into custody in the parking lot of a nearby elementary school, Douglass said. Douglass declined to identify the suspect, but said he was not from Kansas.

Douglass said he could not confirm reports from witnesses that the suspect had yelled, "Heil Hitler" while in the back of the squad car after being taken into custody.

"The suspect in the back of a car made several statements," Douglass said. "We are sifting through and vetting those for accuracy, number one, and number two we are looking at them for their evidentiary value."

Ukraine plans move against separatists

Ukraine's armed forces plan to launch a "full-scale antiterrorist operation" against pro-Russian separatists, acting president Oleksander Turchinov said Sunday, raising the risk of a military confrontation with Moscow.

Feds release cattle after armed protest

After spending a week whisking away nearly 400 cattle they said were illegally grazing on federal land in the Nevada desert, officials facing a battalion of protesters with horses and guns decided to free those cattle in a stunning reversal Saturday.

Police: Mo. shootings 'positively' connected

At least 12 highway and roadway shootings that have wounded three people in the past month near Kansas City, Mo., are "positively" connected, a spree of violence that has stirred anxiety in the region and scared some motorists into taking new routes, police said.

It's not just you. The Blackhawks are playing with an edge lately.

Despite a two-game skid to end the regular season, the team's tenacious physical play helped them win four straight without Patrick Kane or Jonathan Toews.

Sure, Brandon Bollig has been delivering big hits and sticking up for his teammates by dropping the gloves all season, but there's been grit across the board.

"Yeah, we haven't had an issue with that all season; specifically Brandon [Bollig] does a great job of sticking up for [teammates]," Patrick Sharp said. "Andrew Shaw stands in there. You go up and down the lineup and I think every player on the team is willing to not only fight, but play hard for that guy next to him at any time during the season."

Enter Jeremy Morin. The 22-year-old, who rejoined the team from minor-league affiliate Rockford in late March, has four goals and two assists in the past six games.

"The older guys on the team that you look up to let you know what you got to do," Morin said. "I think that's just buying into a role and playing the right way. That's what I've been trying to do this last time up, playing the right way and trying to develop my other side of the game and let things come on the other side of the rink."

Morin's attitude seems to have ignited chemistry with Bryan Bickell. The two have played alongside Peter Regin and Ben Smith recently and have sparked the whole team. And as last year's postseason would indicate, Playoff Bryan Bickell can be a formidable weapon.

"[Bickell has] stepped up big time over the last few weeks," Smith said. "[He's] been more physical, just competed a lot harder. He works hard, and around this time of year, he takes his game to another level. Hopefully that continues moving forward."

Just like that, the Bulls are behind the 8-ball again. Entering Sunday's game against New York, they controlled their own destiny to clinch the No. 3 playoff seed in the East. But Sunday's setback means they're tied with Toronto with two games to go, and the Raptors hold the tiebreaker. Joakim Noah fell just short of a triple double with 13 points, 17 rebounds and nine assists.

9. Thou shalt not question general managers for standing pat.

Rose and Luol Deng. It can't suddenly be considered a weakness.

The Hawks had no reason to believe they didn't have a roster worthy of repeating as champions. The Bulls faced payroll restrictions that prevented them from making a move that would have clogged a roster that needed to stay flexible for the pursuit of Carmelo Anthony.

10. Thou shalt not hold referees responsible for close losses.

Officiating changes in the playoffs, and savvy teams adapt. Never let officiating divert attention from things that affected the game more than any close call.

Bad to the HAIRCUT

Billy Bob Thornton brings menace, humor to 'Fargo'

By Curt Wagner | REDEYE

Billy Bob Thornton has played his share of wonderfully wacky characters. His latest might be the most bizarre—and menacing.

Thornton plays dangerous drifter Lorne Malvo in FX's "Fargo," a 10-episode limited series debuting Tuesday that's a spinoff of the Coen brothers' beloved 1996 cult hit. Malvo, with his goofy hairdo and penchant for messing with people, does just that with milquetoast insurance salesman Lester Nygaard (Martin Freeman) in snow-covered Minnesota.

During a conference call last week with reporters, Thornton talked about Malvo's almost-bowl cut, why the killer likes his job, and how Thornton found his inner Malvo.

Was there anything about this character that you added to the role?

A weird haircut, which was actually a mistake. I got a bad haircut and we had planned on dyeing my hair and a dark beard and all that kind of thing, but I didn't plan on having bangs. ... It wouldn't do right, so I didn't fix it, because I looked at myself in the mirror and I thought, hang on a second here, this is like 1967 L.A. rock. I could be the bass player of the Buffalo Springfield. This is good. Or, Ken Burns, the dark side of Ken Burns.

Bangs are normally associated with innocence and I thought that juxtaposition was pretty great. ... Noah Hawley's script was so tightly written, so good, that all I kind of had to do was show up.

You described Lorne Malvo as conscienceless. How did you find that within yourself?

Usually when you're playing a character, you think a lot about their backstory and that kind of thing. In this instance I didn't want to do that because I doubt Malvo thinks much about his past anyway, so even the character, the guy himself, probably wouldn't think much about it ...

I think what really attracted me to it was not as much that he didn't have a conscience as he has this bizarre sense of humor where he likes to mess with people. ... He just thinks of the moment and "how do I get the job done?"

How exactly do you convey menace?

I worked in a prison years and years ago on a movie and ... there were all these ... big, muscled guys and this one guy told me, "Do you see that little skinny guy over there in the corner? ... That's the guy you don't want to mess with." And I talked to the guy ultimately and I could tell that he meant what he said. So, those are the people you want to watch out for. And it's like maybe I can break this guy in half, but he would hunt me down, he would crawl until his fingers were bloody on the asphalt to get me. So, those are the ones.

I look at Malvo as a type of snake charmer, you know? Once he looks at you, you're under some sort of spell.

You make Malvo scary and likeable. Is that balance of humor and menace hard to find?

That's kind of been my wheelhouse ... sort of intense characters who have a certain sympathetic streak and also a sense of humor. And I'll have 10-year-olds come up to me and say, "Oh, Bad Santa, I just love you." It's like, what? So, yeah, I don't know what it is, but maybe it's that Malvo senses weakness in people, or stupidity or whatever.

He's got this sort of animal instinct and he just smells people out, and I think a lot of times, especially these days and times when the world is going kind of crazy, I think we're all frustrated and want to just shake people a little bit. And so maybe through Malvo you get a chance to slap somebody around a little bit, I don't know. Maybe that's it.

Your character says to Lester, "You're problem is you spend your life thinking there are rules and there aren't." What do you think that Malvo's problem is?

What I think his problem is, is very different than what he thinks his problem is. I don't think he has a problem. Do you know what I mean? He's an animal. ... He goes by an animalistic instinct, and so people like that don't ever consider themselves having a problem and they also think they're invincible.

CWWAGNER@TRIBUNE.COM | @SHOWPATROL

Hoo boy, 'Fargo' works on TV

n cwwagner@ tribune.com Lorne Malvo, Billy Bob Thornton's sinister hitman in "Fargo," doesn't have doubts. He doesn't ask himself the question posed on a poster in the FX series' first episode: "What if you're right and everyone else is wrong?"

His answer, unequivocally, is "I'm always right." (I really like this guy.) Lorne's confidence makes him a singular character a man with a plan and the cojones to carry it out—in the 10-episode limited series. Thornton is phenomenal in the role, stealing every scene he's in and making "Fargo" a captivating pleasure from the moment he appears.

In the premiere, Lorne passes through small-town Bemidji, Minn., leaving a frozen body in the woods before meeting put-upon insurance salesman Lester Nygaard (Martin Freeman) in a hospital waiting room, where Lester explains he's been beaten up by the same bully who tormented him in high school.

"If that was me, I would have killed that man," Lorne says.

The encounter sets all sorts of wheels in motion, plunging the series into the same intoxicating brew of dark comedy, hilarious satire and pulpy violence that washed over the 1996 film of the same name from Joel and Ethan Coen. The Coen brothers serve as producers for the miniseries, which remains true to the style of their film—from the breathtaking cinematography right down to the seemingly slow-burn plotting that could turn off some viewers.

But questioning viewers should stick around; writer Noah Hawley is telling a different, more expansive tale with new and fascinating characters who deliver the goods. Oh, howdy.

Besides Lorne and Lester, there's inquisitive Bemidji Deputy Molly Solverson (Allison Tolman) and ber dimwitted fellow officers Bill Oswalt (Bob Odenkirk) and Gus Grimly (Colin Hanks); hitmen Mr. Numbers and Mr. Wrench (Adam Goldberg and Russell Harvard); recently widowed ex-stripper Gina (Kate Walsh); supermarket kingpin Stavros Milos (Oliver Platt) and personal trainer Don Chumph (Glenn Howerton).

Thornton might get some of the best lines, but Freeman, Tolman and the rest of the cast infuse their characters with distinct and utterly absorbing personalities.

Creating a show inspired by such an iconic movie was a dangerous idea. Skeptical fans might complain it's a cash grab with recycled material. But "Fargo" the TV series—confident as Lorne Malvo—stands firmly on its own. You betcha it does.

Over-the-top, but not actually fun

Facing the camera, a woman in front of him on her knees. Dom Hemingway (Jude Law) stares ahead and asks, "Is my ck exquisite?" An extended, singletake monologue about the wonder of this guy's genitalia follows. It's a hell of a way to start a movie and the beginning of the juiciest character

Law ("Side Effects," "I Heart Huckabees") has had in a while.

The question, then, is whether the actor's embrace of both Dom's hungry hedonism and contrived sentimentality is enough to compensate for feeling like "Dom Hemingway" is a movie that never actually starts. Answer: no. Writer-director Richard Shepard (the superior "The Matador") labors to craft a foul-mouthed comedy with a gooey dramatic center, but he skimps on the laughs and the action. Even though it's in your face, the movie needs more.

After his saucy introduction, safecracker extraordinaire Dom ends a 12-year prison sentence and emerges desperate to reconnect with the daughter (Emilia Clarke of "Game of Thrones") he didn't get to see grow up. First, though, he wants his [bleeping] payback. Dom took the fall for a job orchestrated by Fontaine (Oscar nominee Demian Bichir of "A Better Life"), and the sequence of events that takes place at Fontaine's estate shows how a movie can be over-the-top but not actually fun.

And the lack of guilt Dom feels about a car accident that's entirely his fault indicates the way Shepard seems to pick and choose at random what incidents in the coincidenceheavy "Dom Hemingway" will matter and when Dom will and won't be a stand-up guv. His attitude toward others, including his old pal Dickie (Richard E. Grant), constantly shifts, which might be tolerable if Dom weren't ultimately a cliched depiction of a baddie with a soft spot trying to fight through all the muck.

The muck works better: Law devours the chance to turn Dom loose, including the rare act of making James Taylor lyrics a bitter, bile-spewing plea for reimbursement. Still, then he seems only like a movie character yelling, making it tough to buy it or care when his anger turns to tears.

Leaving behind the heartthrob

Los Angeles Times

For much of his career, Jude Law has been the archetypal leading man, relying on looks and charm to land featured parts, then deploying them smoothly on screen.

But over the past few years, edge and grit have crept into the actor's roles. The transformation reached its apex when "Dom Hemingway" hit theaters Friday. The 41-year-old plays a violent down-on-his-luck crook, sometimes unrecognizable and often despicable, in the film, a character piece in genre clothing from writer-director Richard Shepard ("The Matador").

Gone and buried is the unctuousness of Law's Oscar-nominated turn as Dickie Greenleaf from "The Talented Mr. Ripley" or his breezily winning "Alfie." Present and very much alive? The self-defeating rage of characters like "Taxi Driver's" Travis Bickle or even, in its way, a reinvention of Ben Kingsley's vile gangster in "Sexy Beast."

"There was once a part of me that was frustrated by a public perception as this sort of young pretty thing," Law said. "This is a very good opportunity to put all of that to bed."

That might be an understatement. At the start of the film, Hemingway is seen as he is released from prison, having served a 12-year sentence instead of squealing on his former boss, a Russian baddie named Ivan Fontaine (Demian Bichir). Upon his release, Hemingway seeks out Fontaine at his French country estate and demands recompense. He is granted it, but Dom being Dom, it isn't long before he has mucked things up and landed himself in desperate straits.

Marked by a grandiose narcissism, a bleak sense of humor and a lyrical streak—not to mention some mean mutton chops—Law's Hemingway is all working-class English brine, intelligence simmering beneath the menace, with a sense of humor he displays even as he beats men within an inch of their life.

The character's piece de resistance is an opening monologue, much of it unprintable, in which he proclaims the greatness of his own genitals such that the organ in question is variously lauded as able to save starving children in Somalia and win a Nobel Peace Prize.

"I remember reading the script and thinking, 'This is such a rare combination. There's a scale of car crash to this guy, not just one car but a huge highway pileup,' " Law said. "And yet I was also curious about the poetry in the mouth of this uneducated man." (While shooting the film, the actor noted "there was a volume to my existence, with too many latenight whiskeys and cigarettes." Anything for a role.)

They say everyone has their price. Craig's (Chicago native Pat Healy) appears to be $500.

That's what it takes for him to participate in a game orchestrated by wealthy strangers Colin (David Koechner) and Violet (Sara Paxton), who kick things off with small challenges. Get that girl to slap you for $50. Smack that stripper's behind for $200. Craig passes; his old pal Vince (an unrecognizable Ethan Embry of "Can't Hardly Wait") jumps at the chance. Not until the married couple, expertly manipulating these blue-collar schmoes, offer $500 to punch a bouncer, does husband and new father Craig take the bait. And, of course, that's just the beginning.

"Cheap Thrills" is like a modern "Twilight Zone" episode crossed with what Colin himself deems a non-televised reality show. It's the first movie since "The Box" that directly asks characters to toe the line between morality and money. The filmmakers stack the deck a little high: Craig loses his job and has an eviction notice looming over his head later the same day. He's a fish in a barrel for this kind of opportunity; surely Colin and Violet don't hit the jackpot with every target. And don't hit the jackpot with every target. And while several better-left-unspoiled levels of this escalating game startle and disturb, the ultimate test moves the movie from chilling to predictable.

Yet first-time feature director E.L. Katz achieves sustained unease throughout. Writers David Chirchirillo and Trent Haaga craft revealing details, and the cast only helps. Koechner's a disturbing hoot, playing with the increasingly unhinged Healy and Embry. But it's Paxton who most unsettlingly harnesses part of what makes "Cheap Thrills" so irresistible. In a story about hearing a skateboarder get hit by an SUV, and in her facial expressions as she observes the entertainment her husband has orchestrated for her birthday party, sociopathic Violet comes off as a lethal combination of empty and clever.

Beautiful innocence lost

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

Absolutely gorgeous and just a tad too enamored with its style, "Hide Your Smiling Faces," which was nominated for best narrative feature at the Tribeca Film Festival and a prize for a filmmaker's first feature at the London Film Festival, distills young boys' discovery of fear and mortality into a lyrical elegy for innocence. The lush scenery and minimal activity of Nowhere, America, could be a beautiful escape or a symbol of nothingness that needs to be fled. Nodding to (the overrated) Terrence Malick and early David Gordon Green, writerdirector Daniel Patrick Carbone's feature debut ripples as quietly as a lake while the characters experience familiar surroundings with new eyes. It has the tender, unexpected devastation of poetry.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD I READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Aries March 21-April 19
You could have a missed connection with someone. A moon opposition is making it harder to focus, schedule a date one night, but it's so you might schedule a date one night, but it's really supposed to happen on a different one. Don't worry. You'll hook up soon enough.

Taurus April 20-May 20 You might find yourself lecturing your honey. Maybe your guy isn't paying his share of the bills.

Or perhaps your girlfriend keeps acting vague about whether she wants to be exclusive with you. The moon says talk it out.

Gemini May 21-June 21 There's a funky lunar eclipse, and this is making you feel jumpy. Don't lash out at your partner just because you're in a mood. And don't make any big moves. Avoid getting engaged or buying a home.

Cancer June 22-July 22 Venus is increasing your longing for a certain someone. This person might be unavailable. Or this guy or girl could be somebody you used to date, but you split up long ago. You'll have to figure out what your feelings are trying to tell you.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
You and your sweetheart might find yourselves disagreeing about
'big stuff' like religions, politics or gender issues, thanks to the moon. It's good to debate hot topics. Don't shy away from discussing things like grown-ups; that's how real relationships are built.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22 You're reconsidering your position on someone. Maybe you hated this person, but now you wonder if you're really in love.

Or perhaps you didn't understand this person very well, but now you have more information.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Mars is making it hard for you to focus. If you have to study, complete a big work project or deal with stress at home, your energies might be scattered. See if you can get your honey to help you out in exchange for a hot date night.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
The moon in your sign is helping you identify what's really going on in your relationship. If you've been on-again/off-again with someone, you'll have greater clarity about which is the right path.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21 You could be attracted to someone who is super shy. Your outgoing, friendly nature will draw this person toward you. Sometimes it's fun dating somebody who is your complete opposite. Venus says it's worth checking things out.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
You'll want to put your foot down as the sun makes you super confident. If your partner isn't treating you right, bring this issue out into the open. If your honey has been evasive, confront him or her about those lies.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You'll be in angel mode as the moon enhances your generosity. You'll volunteer at a homeless shelter or soup kitchen, or spend all night with a friend who just broke up with her loser boyfriend. Doing kind deeds is good for the soul.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Venus is increasing your sensitivity to touch. You'll want to ask your partner for a nice massage. Or If you're single, try snuggling with your pet doggle or kitty. Do something that allows you to connect on a warm, physical level with another breathing being.

WIREIMAGE

Looks like the singer from Down Under found a glue gun and stuck all kinds of shiny things on her lovely pale pink gown. And the shoes? No. Fresh from showering, Rihanna stormed the red carpet in this radiant robe.

Rihanna

Shailene Woodley

The "Divergent" star wore a greenish-brown leather dress that says, "I'm ready for the sequel, or to play a gladiator!"

Nicki Minaj

Now that she's an actress she's co-starring in "The Other Woman"—the formerly outrageous dresser toned things down in this slinky black number.

THE QUOTE
He's
wonderful in 'Colbert Report,' but he's got gears he hasn't even shown people yet. He would be remarkable."

-Jon Stewart, to Vulture, on why his buddy Stephen Colbert would be great as David Letterman's replacement on "The Late Show." This, clearly, was before Colbert was announced as CBS' official pick for the role, but it's nice to know Stewart has his friend's back.

Name game

"Game of Thrones" fans know there will only ever be one true Khaleesithe mother of dragons, Daenerys Stormborn of House Targarven. In 2012, however, a lot of other Khaleesis popped up around the country. According to Social Security Administration data crunched by vox. com, 146 babies named Khaleesi were born in the U.S. that year, an increase from fewer than five Khaleesis born in 2010. The data also showed 21 newborns were named "Daenerys" in 2012.

Zac Efron promised to strip off his shirt if he won the Best Shirtless Performance award at the 2014 MTV Movie Awards on Sunday, and Rita Ora made sure he followed through. "I don't know what to say," Efron said onstage after his seriously impressive six-pack ran away with the award for "That Awkward Moment." Then British singer Ora ripped open his shirt and Efron, at first shy about it, took it all the way off and flexed. The crowd at the Nokia Theater in L.A. went wild. That's OK, Zac. You don't have to say anything. Find more awards results at redeyechicago.com.

CORRECTION

Kiss frontman Paul Stanley was misidentified on Page 44 of Friday's edition.

Coachella surprises

Beyonce surprised fans Saturday when she hopped on stage with sister Solange at the Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival in Indio. Calif. She performed "Losing You" with her baby sis on the same day hubby Jay Z unexpectedly performed with his former rival, Nas. Also Saturday, Pharrell Williams and his big hat welcomed special guests such as Nelly, Busta Rhymes, Puff Daddy, Snoop Dogg, Gwen Stefani and Tyler, The Creator.

THE DIGIT

That's this weekend's take for "Captain America: The Winter Soldier," according to studio estimates Sunday. In the battle of sequels, "Captain America" beat out cartoon "Rio 2," which made $39 million.

Upton

Smaller is better?

They've brought Kate Upton much success, but the supermodel wishes her breasts were smaller. "Every single day, I'm like, 'Oh, man, it would be so much easier,' especially if people didn't constantly bring them up," she told Britain's The Sun on Sunday. Smaller, or removable: "If I could just take them off like they were clip-ons," said Upton, who is co-starring in "The Other Woman" with Cameron Diaz and Leslie Mann.

Fairy tales do come true

"Once Upon a Time" co-stars Ginnifer Goodwin and Josh Dallas had a fairy tale wedding of their own over the weekend. The couple tied the knot at sunset in the Los Angeles area, according to E! News. The couple is coupled on TV, too, playing Snow White and Prince Charming in the ABC series.

Pose, dance—and eat

KFC is hoping its latest idea will make promgoers' mouths water—at least in Kentucky. The chicken chain and Kentucky's Nanz & Kraft Florists debuted the "Chicken Corsage" at nanzandkraft.com. The corsage is made up of fresh baby's breath and a $5 KFC gift check. Consumers have to add the drumstick.
